NIA Announces the 2012 Theodore H. Brodie Distinguished Safety Award Winners

The National Insulation Association (NIA) announced the 2012 Theodore H. Brodie Distinguished Safety Award winners at NIA’s 58th Annual Convention in Bonita Springs, Florida, on April 18, 2013. The Brodie Safety Award is NIA’s highest industry honor for outstanding safety performance. This type of rating from a national organization such as NIA has proved invaluable to companies when they are bidding work and obtaining or retaining customers.

Recognizing that safety concerns differ between contractors and general industry companies, NIA created separate awards for different sectors of the insulation industry. The following are the award winners in the distributor/fabricator category:

Bronze:
- Advance Thermal Corporation
- Insulation Fabricators, Inc.

Silver:
- Superior Plus Construction Products Corporation/ Specialty Products & Insulation

The Brodie Safety Award, first given in 2004, was established to honor the leaders in the industry who go above and beyond to guarantee safe working conditions. Each company was evaluated by their overall safety program, means of communication and training, and safety policy.

As the premier source of knowledge and information for the mechanical insulation sector, NIA feels it is essential to support the efforts of these outstanding companies, as safety is a crucial part of any insulation business. The award was posthumously named after Theodore H. Brodie, a tireless advocate for safety in the industry.
